Synopsis

A sense of ownership is a significant characteristic of a sustainable society. It encompasses whose voice is heard, who has influence over decisions, and who is affected by the process and outcome. The strategic interests and actions of individuals or organizations that contribute to community development efforts can be determined through the size of ownership. This workshop focuses on two major tools in creating ownership in a community, i.e., 1) the prerequisite and 2) the value proposition. The workshop is highly experiential; hence participants need to bring their own experience to which the tools can be applied.
