June 3, 2014 Berita No comments

KUALA LUMPUR — The Academic Research on Palm Oil Sustainability (ARPOS) symposium on June 10 and 11 aims to gather data to be used for policy advocacy and public education on sustainable practices of the palm oil industry.

To be held at Universiti Kebangsaan Malaysia, the symposium will also discuss the multi-disciplinary and coordinated approaches in the research on palm oil sustainability.

In a statement today, Yayasan Sime Darby (YSD) said that in tandem with the objectives of the symposium, the ARPOS Network initiated by UKM-YSD Chair in Climate Change would also be officially launched during the event.

“The ARPOS Network will operate as a platform for the academic palm oil sustainability research to feed results and findings that could aid the decision-making process in the palm oil industry and the government’s policy-making,” it added.
